Salvatore Guarino

Operations & Project Management Leader | Process Improvement | Client Success | Building Systems, Solving Problems, and Helping Teams Execute

St. Petersburg, Florida, United States

Summary

For most of my career, I've been the person people call when things feel messy. I've spent the last 10+ years helping organizations improve operations, manage projects, support clients, and create systems that make execution easier. I've worked across healthcare, recruiting, logistics, compliance, coaching, and professional services, but the work has always been surprisingly similar: solve problems, improve processes, support people, and help businesses run better. I'm naturally curious, process-minded, and wired to look for ways things can be improved. Sometimes that means building a new workflow. Sometimes it means helping a team communicate more effectively. Sometimes it means digging into a problem nobody wants to own and finding a solution. My experience includes project management, client success, recruiting, process improvement, operational leadership, onboarding, team development, and cross-functional collaboration. I've worked with startups, growing companies, and established organizations, helping turn ideas into execution and strategy into results. At the end of the day, I enjoy building things, solving problems, and helping people succeed. I believe good operations create better experiences for employees, clients, and businesses alike. Specialties: Operations Management, Project Management, Process Improvement, Client Success, Team Development, Change Management, KPI Development, Workflow Optimization, and Cross Functional Collaboration.
